- You are doing great work. I'm very appreciative of opening this up for discussion. Please contact me @ msperic@gmail.com.
- Thank you for presenting to use and taking the parents' input into consideration.
- I think 87 student needs must be considered at put first. "Students come first"
- I appreciate this format and the opportunity for feedback during the planning process. I think the timing is great in that you had a plan to present but that it's not yet set in stone. I do not like any of the other plans suggested (full disclosure, none of the options would involve my kids moving). I see a world of issues with open boundaries and I'm sure it's obvious how many parents would have attended if the proposal affected the entire community in that way. I do think it's important to keep families together as much as possible.

Additionally, I hate that young teachers having babies or getting married was spoken of as a negative – even if it played off as a joke. As a teacher and a mother, I would love if work/life balance could be easier or even if just not thought of as a barrier.

I also worry that listing refugee families moving in as a potential reason for projections being off (especially in a hot-emotion environment like this was) risks scapegoating an already vulnerable population that has a lot of misinformation already circulating around resources they are getting under the misconception that they aren't deserving of. As a sponsor (of a family living in a different community), I would hate for my family to be blamed by others if their kids move.

- Thank you for addressing our concerns. Hoping we come out with a common solution.
- I support the idea of having both schools change to K-5. I suggest when the communications from the school come out to give the parents to voice on their decisions if they want to change school so the 87 students might not have to change.
- None
- Looking forward to the survey.
- Tough decisions to make to please everyone. But Good Job!
- I support the change as it is for the good of the entire community.
