

Navigating Using Landmarks

Landmarks are permanent, which means that they are always located in the same place and cannot move around. Knowing where landmarks are in proximity to your stops will help you get to your chosen destination without getting lost. Observing the landmarks around you is one of the best ways to remember where your bus or train stops are located.

Many people who take public transit use landmarks to help them know when their stop is coming up and they have to get off the bus. Helpful community landmarks may include a store, arena, parks or playgrounds, gas stations, etcetera. Your community will have some landmarks that can help you navigate public transit. Below are some examples of community landmarks:

Playground

Field

School
